"My membership of the LPI has provided me with valuable connections, resources and insights that I simply couldn't have obtained in other ways. I have also had the honour to be involved with judging the annual Learning Awards for some years. These offer the top accolades for professionals in the field."

Charles Jennings FLPI, co-founder, 70:20:10 Institute

"Membership of the LPI ensures I remain connected to a wide network of L&D professionals and beneficial resources which help to keep me up to date on the latest developments within the industry. The breadth and variety of sectors covered is exceptional and there is much to learn from outside of an individual's normal sphere of influence. The opportunity to connect with peers and industry thought leadership, plus the benefits from LPI programs are simply invaluable."

Graeme Phillips FLPI, Senior Manager Product Training EMEA & JAPAC, Oracle

"Membership of the LPI helped keep my thinking fresh through access to a wide network of L&D professionals across a variety of sectors and excellent resources about new advances in learning and development. The chance to connect with peers and make use of LPI innovations like the Capability Map, CLO Connect and the LPN help ensure my team are equipped to face the future."

Kandy Woodfield FLPI, Head of Learning & Development, Samaritans

"Gaining professional membership with the LPI is a significant milestone. It's an acknowledgement of the diverse and complex role adopted by learning and development professionalstion at its core."

Daniel Bland, FLPI, Proton Training Ltd.

"LPI Corporate Membership underpins our commitment to become a Centre of Excellence in the NHS. It has given us a professional and industry-wide seal of approval that we can be proud of. It has also raised the profile of our department and standing within the learning community."

Dena O'Gorman FLPI, IT Training Manager, Guy's & St. Thomas' NHS Foundation Trust

"For me joining the Institute was a no-brainer. A body dedicated to my chosen career path, a way for me to prove to others (especially employers) my commitment to that career and the professionalism that I believe in. Almost 15 years later, and even with a name change, the LPI still helps me to show the same ideals, professionalism and commitment. My favourite event throughout the year has to be LEARNING LIVE - I get the opportunity to reconnect with friends and colleagues within the learning and development industry and gain some new ideas/insights from thought-leaders."

Michelle Kaye FLPI, Michelle Kaye Training Limited

"A number of people within my network were affiliated with the LPI in some way, particularly people that I enjoyed interacting with and from whom I was learning a lot from. The LPI really understands the link between learning and performance and this is not something that all organisations understand. That understanding manifests itself through the events that the LPI facilitates and the many and varied benefits that they provide for members. For those reasons I really wanted to become a member and endorse what they stand for and I would encourage any serious L&D professional to become a member."

James McLuckie FLPI, Learning and Performance Solutions Director, Good Practice
