HOW DOES THE MASTERCLASS WORK?

The Performance Consulting Masterclass is a two-day workshop using exercises, discussions and activities to develop the skills HR and L&D professionals need for a performance consulting role.

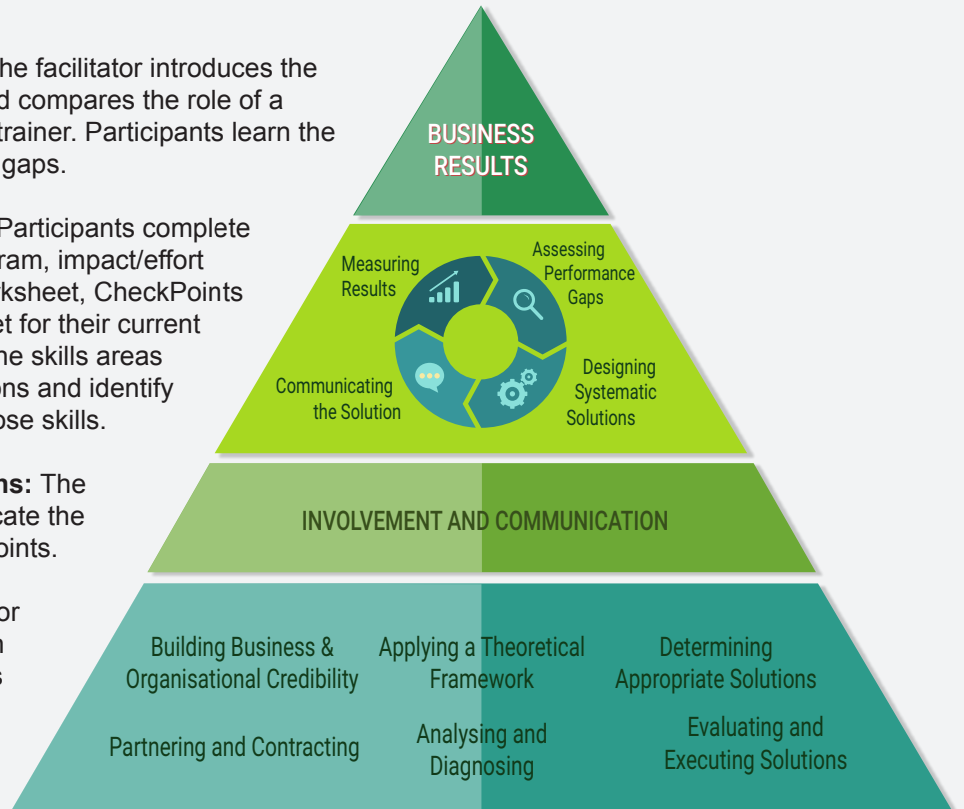

Day One

Performance Consulting Defined: The facilitator introduces the concept of performance consulting and compares the role of a performance consultant with that of a trainer. Participants learn the factors that contribute to performance gaps.

Designing Performance Solutions: Participants complete a process map, cause-and-effect diagram, impact/effort grid, Identifying Related Initiatives worksheet, CheckPoints worksheet, and Involvement worksheet for their current business situation. They next review the skills areas related to designing systematic solutions and identify personal development activities for those skills.

Implementing Performance Solutions: The facilitator introduces how to communicate the solution using guidelines and CheckPoints.

Simulation Preparation: The facilitator introduces and distributes a simulation for the participants to use in their skills practice session.

Day Two

Simulation Analysis & Presentations: In small groups, participants work through the performance consulting process and apply their knowledge, skills and tools to the simulation. They then present their analysis of the simulation and receive feedback from the facilitator and other participants.

Individual Development Plans: Using assessments and developmental activities identified throughout the workshop, participants develop individual plans to enhance their performance consulting skills.
